

Would You Wear Rainbow Makeup at Your Wedding?

Even if you've always wanted to be a unicorn, is your wedding day the best day to try it out? We talked to an expert to get the details.

By Carrie Anton

♡ FAVORITE

PHOTO BY BITTERLACEBEAUTY.COM

If you've always dreamed of a fun wedding full of pops of vibrant color, then the latest makeup craze consuming the Internet might leave you with a few ideas. Created by Etsy shop Bitter Lace Beauty, Prism, the powder-based, pastel-striped highlighter, allows you to paint a glittery rainbow on your face.

Ready to plan a wedding that's totally you? Let's do this!

SIGN UP

THANKS, MAYBE LATER

Oh my gosh you guys! All of your Prism orders shipped out today! I can't wait to see all your photos and swatches!!! Who got one? Are you excited?! Remember we will be restocking this color.. be patient with us! ❤️❤️❤️🌈 #bitterfacebeauty

While looking like Rainbow Brite might not be your top bridal beauty goal, the colors can be used separately, allowing you to pick from frosty shades of pink, peach, yellow, light green, sky blue and lavender. While touted as a highlighter, the pigment is also said to be rich enough to double as a sparkly eyeshadow.

The trend quickly went viral, causing the Prism palette to sell out. However, via a message on the Etsy shop homepage, the owner assures it will be back in stock on April 29, selling for $22.

Wearing this look for your bachelorette party or possibly a music festival-themed big day might work wedding-wise, but Nola Kahn, Creative Director and Makeup Artist, recommends against it. "Don't get me wrong, I love unicorns!" says Kahn. "But highlights should be subtle and brighten up your face instead of putting colorful iridescent stripes on your skin."

Are you guys ready for some swatches? 🌈💖 #bitterfacebeauty

And while makeup highlights can work well to enhance your natural beauty, Kahn warns that overly frosty highlights don't always translate well when photographed.

To highlight your features when getting married, don't go for coverage, and instead focus on adding a soft, dewy glow. "An easy way is to get a good champagne color, which looks great on everyone," says Kahn. "When applying, only highlight the high points of your face, and the corner of your eyes to open them up."

Sure, makeup can be fun to experiment with, but if you want your wedding photos to be timeless, maybe save the unicorn status for a night out with the girls. But if used very subtly, we love the glow it gives, like on the bride below.

Photo By JAKE ANDERSON PHOTOGRAPHY

Photographer: Jake Anderson Photography

Makeup: Nola Kahn

Hair: Leah Anderson

Styling: Mint + Lovely

Wedding Ideas + Etiquette

Makeup

Beauty

More Articles We Think You'll ❤️